NEIGHBORHOOD SCAVENGER HUNT

Scavenger Stop: Underhill Park – Built for Play

A place where sports and history come together!

Fun Fact: Opened in 1912, Underhill Park was one of Spokane's first parks built for recreation and its original playground equipment came from the fairgrounds!

Activity: Pretend you're a sports announcer and call out the action of an imaginary game! Little ones can play "sports pose freeze" strike a pose and let others guess your sport!

Scavenger Stop: Ben Burr Trail – Tracks to Trails

Follow the path where trains once rumbled through Spokane!

Fun Fact: The Ben Burr Trail follows the old Spokane Inland Empire Railroad line and is named after Benjamin Burr. It's a gentle, family-friendly hike, just 3 miles long!

Activity: Pretend you're a train conductor, what would your train carry through this neighborhood? Announce it to your crew!

Scavenger Stop: Liberty Park

Adventure through a park full of history, trails, and hidden views!

Fun Fact: Liberty Park was once one of Spokane's finest. Though reshaped by I-90, it now features caves, trails to Underhill Park, and an overlook with stunning views.

Activity: Become a nature detective! Explore the trails and search for clues—animal tracks, cool rocks, shady caves, or birds flying near the overlook. What will you discover?

Scavenger Stop: Music Mural at New Developed Nations

Look for a wall where powerful voices rise, not with sound, but through art and purpose.

Fun Fact: This mural represents an innovative program that uses music as a unique form of therapy. From lyric writing sessions and music production to poetry, NDN empowers youth and individuals by offering a safe, creative space to tell their stories in a fun, exciting, and healing way.

Activity: Make up a line of a song or a poem about your day. What would your beat sound like? Share it with a friend or write it down!

Scavenger Stop: Carl Maxey Center

A mural that speaks—literally!

Fun Fact: This interactive mural celebrates 20 Black community leaders from East Central. With the Artive app, you can hold your phone up to a yellow-outlined face and hear that person's story come to life!

Activity: Younger kids can pick a person and give them a name and a fun fact. Older kids can listen to a story through the app and share what inspired them most!

Scavenger Stop: Spokane's Stonehenge

Step into the past where stone paths and basalt walls whisper stories of early park design.

Fun Fact: Liberty Park once featured a grand design. Stone paths and basalt ruins has a unique overlook of liberty park

Activity: Become a nature detective! Search for pieces of the old stone path. Can you spot where the trail might have led? Touch the basalt wall. Imagine the park long ago and share what you think it looked like.
